

QUALITY REPAIRS START WITH SMART INSURANCE CHOICES.

At Body Builders Automotive, we collaborate with a wide range of insurance carriers, both reputable and less reliable, on a daily basis. It's important to remember that insurance companies are for-profit organizations, and their primary focus is their bottom line. This can sometimes lead to actions aimed at reducing claims payouts, such as utilizing substandard parts or service providers, denying crucial safety inspections, or delaying claim settlements—all in an effort to maximize their profits.

Unfortunately, insurance companies may not always prioritize your best interests as much as you'd expect. They may delay necessary repairs, deny critical operations, or justify their actions with questionable or unfounded reasoning.

However, in our experience, some insurance companies demonstrate a greater commitment to their customers' well-being. These companies are less likely to engage in such practices and often provide better service—all while offering competitive rates comparable to those heavily advertised on TV.
